History

The origin of the North Dakota Speech and Theatre Association date to the early 1950s and the activities of the North Dakota Association of Speech Teachers. It appears that in 1953 the Speech and Drama Bulletin newsletter began publication by members of the Speech Advisory Committee of the North Dakota High School Activities Association. The newsletter became a way to communicate announcements and information to the teachers in the state who worked with forensic and theatre activities. At the 1952 North Dakota Teachers' Convention Dr. John Penn of the University of North Dakota chaired the Speech Advisory Committee and out of that meeting became the first president of the newly organized North Dakota Speech and Theatre Association.

"Planning programs for the teachers' convention in the fall and spring meetings; promoting debate, speech, and drama activities; scheduling tournaments; and encouraging forensic and dramatic coaches to participate fully appear to be the main purposes around which the activities of the Association revolved."

At the 1985 biennial meeting of the NDSTA it was approved to hold an annual convention for teachers and coaches involved with speech communication and theatre arts activities, and the first convention was held in 1986. In 1987 the first annual issue of the association's North Dakota Journal of Speech and Theatre was published. In 2006-2007 the name of the association was changed to Communication, Speech and Theatre Association of North Dakota.

History based upon information obtained from: Littlefield, Robert S. Voices on the Prairie: Bringing Speech and Theatre to North Dakota. Fargo, N.D.: Institute for Regional Studies, 1998. Robert Littlefield joined the NDSU faculty in 1979 and served as chair of the Department of Mass Communication, Speech Communication and Theatre Art beginning in 1984. For North Dakota Speech and Theatre Association he served as president 1985-1987, historian 1988-2003 and editorial board of its ND Journal of Speech and Theatre 1997-2003.
